

ASSESSMENT FEES

Assessments require a much greater amount of time than therapy sessions do. This is because the tests that are administered need to be scored, results transcribed, and all the data need to be analyzed and integrated in order to formulate an overall impression of the pattern of strengths and weaknesses. Through our analyses we determine “what does all of this mean?” and “what’s the most effective treatment approach?”.

It is also important to obtain a variety of objective measures in order to evaluate progress along the way. It is essential to take good measurements at the beginning of the therapy process so we have a baseline to track your progress.

Different types of communication disorders entail different amounts of direct assessment time, time to score tests, time to transcribe speech and language samples, time to analyze and integrate results, and time to prepare a summary report for you. The following are the assessment costs for the various communication difficulties we treat at Sound Expression (unless otherwise indicated, price includes a one-page summary report):

Articulation	$235
